

By Lewis Macdonald / Updated: 01 Mar 2016

Jobs and job creation in the cycling economy

Date of publishing:

01 Oct 2014

Sources:

European Sources

Cycling as a mode of transport can be seen as a driver of jobs and economic activity just as much as cars and public transport vehicles. The European Cyclists' Federation has produced a report which examines the contribution that cycling makes to economic and job growth across the EU, ranging from bicycle manufacture and repair, to cycle tourism, to the economic impact of public bike-sharing schemes.

More links:

Cycling Works: jobs and job creation in the cycling economy
