The International Leaders in Urban Transportation Council is a brand new event that aims to highlight public transport best practice from all over the world and advocate for sustainable mobility. It is a successor event to the annual Moscow Expert Transport Council, which has taken place in Moscow for each of the last five years. It will take place in Moscow between 13 and 17 May 2020.

World transport leaders will gather in Moscow to explore new solutions to global challenges in urban transportation. The event’s goal is to extend cooperation with international experts on the development of urban transport. It will help to share experience and continue the dialogue aimed at solving such complex problems as how to improve urban mobility in the face of uncertainty and new challenges.

Participants will include city mayors, ministers, CEOs of mobility operators, leaders of innovation companies, international transport experts and academics working in the field of urban mobility research and development.
