Past event

Information / Description:

Micro-mobility systems have also been significantly impacted by the Covid-19 crisis. Many cities have enforced closures of their local systems to support, or as a result of, reductions in travel by the local population or for public health reasons due to the shared nature of public systems.

How will the micro-mobility industry emerge from the Covid crisis? Much is still unknown, but what are the key challenges, as well as opportunities, that we as operators, cities, innovators and policy experts should be considering in order to rebuild a robust and relevant micro-mobility industry?

Vianova is leading a series of webinars with thought leaders, cities and operators in the coming weeks exploring these issues.

This webinar will discuss:

- how has micro-mobility been impacted by the Covid-19 crisis
- how are cities and operators thinking about the future of micro-mobility in the immediate post-lockdown phase
- how will shared services have to change in the longer term as a result of the crisis

The webinar will take place on 30 April 2020 at 10:00 CET.
