Green mobility guide for the performing arts

Although there are many good general principles for reducing the environmental impact of an individual or group's activities, different groups may need to consider specific aspects. Additionally, many industries and sectors may not be aware of, or lack the capacity to implement, specific measures to reduce their carbon footprint.

The Green Mobility Guide for the Performing Arts provides recommendations for reducing the environmental impact of touring European theatre companies and venues. It could also be useful for local authorities involving in organising arts events in public spaces.
