A report from the CIVITAS SUMPS-Up project provides city planners with the step-by-step know-how necessary to develop SUMP action plans. Furthermore, it takes into account different levels of SUMP development experience and SUMP maturity among cities.

The report contains guidance in terms of what to include in an action plan, including responsibilities, resources, stakeholder coordination, time plans, and funding sources.

In addition, it breaks down the process of developing an action plan into a six-step process, with the final stage of this an implementation plan.

Alongside this, it contains examples of action plan templates, references to examples of good action plans, and a user manual.

The report acts as a complement to three SUMPs-Up manuals that assist cities with SUMP measure selection by giving them more precise information on how to implement these measures successfully.
