Date of Production:

12 Apr 2016

Topic:

Walking and cycling

The concept of sustainable modes of transport is receiving increasing attention, as cities explore innovative ways to decrease motorised traffic and carbon emissions.

Bike-sharing is one of these ways, encouraging a less car-dependent lifestyle and potentially even kick-starting a cycling culture in a city.

This e-course, part of the CIVITAS Initiative's extensive catalogue of online learning, provides an introduction into the concept of bike-sharing and shares the experiences and strategies of different cities which already have implemented a bike-sharing scheme.

The CIVITAS e-courses are individual courses that can be followed online, anyplace, anytime. Each e-course is concluded with an online test.

CIVITAS Learning Centre certificates are given to participants who have successfully passed the course. An e-course takes approximately 1-2 hours.
